San Antonio city leaders are looking far into the future to help tackle population growth issues.

A new initiative called SA Tomorrow aims to help the city prepare for an estimated 1 million more people by 2040. The city says it's a three-piece effort to guide the Alamo City toward sustainable growth.

SA Tomorrow will address issues like transportation, jobs and housing. VIA Metropolitan Transit will play a major role in helping change travel patterns and public transportation.

"VIA has a 2035 long-range plan, and we're updating that to a 2040 plan and that will run concurrently with the city," Jeffrey Arndt with VIA Metropolitan Transit said. "That's why it works so well that we partner with the city in this effort. We're on the same timeline, and we both have that same mission."

The formal kick off for SA Tomorrow will be April 11. The event is free and open to the public.
